About the work

Il testamento (The Will) premiered in Dublin at the Royal Irish Academy of Music on March 26th, 2014 and is presented in Italy for the first time. The performance of this work combines elements of a theatrical play and a chamber opera. The spoken texts are in English, the texts of the arias are in English, Portuguese, and Italian.

The plot

Paola (singer/actress) and Claudia (pianist/actress), two cousins in their forties, meet in the house just inherited from an old uncle who has passed away. For Claudia it's a return: years earlier she had left her native village to find success in the city. Paola, on the other hand, never moved from the small town where they were born. She had always been the beautiful and extroverted cousin, admired by everyone, whereas Claudia had never succeeded, before leaving, in breaking out of her native shyness. In spite of the tight relation they had had in their youth, at the outset of this meeting the two cousins are cold and formal. They talk then of their uncle, Giovanni, a music teacher and coach who died without heirs. Memories begin to pour out and with the memories the two seem to rediscover their old familiarity and frankness with each other. What was the real reason Claudia left? What causes Paola's uneasiness even though she never moved from the village?

The composer & playwright

The first work in Riccardo Riccardi's catalogue dates from 1973. A composer of chamber, orchestral and vocal music, he has, since the early 1990's, focused primarily on music theater. Riccardi's operas for both large and small casts are based on his own libretti, some original, as in this work, and others adapted from early 20th century writers. He holds a Chair of Composition at the Santa Cecilia Conservatory in Rome. More information at <http://www.riccardoriccardi.com/>

The performers

Margaret Bridge, Dearbhla Máire Collins, Richard Thomas and Cormac O' Briain are all outstanding graduates of the Royal Irish Academy of Music.
